“ I have been so comforted by the things people have said both here and at his memorial service about Willard and his influence for good!
If I could, I would hold my son in my arms again, but, instead, in my prayers, I will put my arms around all of you who have been blessed by Willard and will pray that his influence on your lives will bring you all into a living relationship with the God Willard met when he was a teenager.

“ I have known Willard for almost 2 yrs. now. I am 1 of the employees who have been at the Embassy since it's opening working the breakfast shift. So I use to see Willard every morning before his shift. We'd get there at 5 am and he would get there bout 630 or 7am after his bike ride from home. A lot of the time we (breakfast crew) would see and talk to him in the break area while we had our breakfast. He even helped us bus tables like you have seen us do these past few mornings when we would get really busy. We had coffee in common for sure every morning. He'd get his coffee in a big plastic bottle, I think he drank it black. I on the other hand I need milk and sugar. I remember he had the cutest smile, and it always made me smile even on those rough 5 a.m. shifts. I bet when he was a baby, that smile brightened your day. Willard's time here was a precious one. You dont know how much you care for a person until there gone. Although I only knew your son for a short time in his life. I want to let let you know that he was truely loved as a co-worker, and someone I will call friend. Your son was a very sweet man who was the most dedicated person who came to work. I say that cause he rode his bike 15 or so miles every morning to work and back home. That takes discipline and a willing heart. I am very sadden by his passing, and wish I could of gave him a hug the last time I saw him. But forgiving ourselves and releasing Willard to God Almighty is healing, as well as forgiving Willard for whatever needs forgiving. Time is healing and God restores our brokenhearts. God Bless Willard.

“ Sorry for your loss he will be missed by alot of pepole.

Aunt June & Aunt Diane - June 21, 2010 at 12:00 AM

“ When I worked at Embassy, in breakfast comp, Willard was always very helpful. He would do things to help the rush of breakfast go smooth behind the scenes. I always enjoyed our short conversations because he always had something interesting to share. He was always friendly and in a good mood every time I worked with him. I'm sorry for his family's loss.
